The Okaloosa Regional Airport now has a watch dog on their website – an airfare watch dog. This added feature continuously searches the web for the lowest airfares from the Okaloosa Regional Airport to many destinations across the country. “The airlines regularly adjust their airfares throughout the day due to competition and often without advertising them. This feature allows you to see reduced fares to select destinations and dispels perceptions that other airports are always cheaper than VPS”, noted Airports Director, Greg Donovan.

Once you see a destination that interests you simply click on it. You will be taken to the airfare watchdog website where you can see the specific data on the flight such as how many advanced booking days are required or if there are specific days of travel. If you don't see a flight that interests you, don't get discouraged. Airfarewatchdog.com works hard to assure the most up to date and lowest fares are posted.

Please remember, unless otherwise noted, the fares listed do not include all taxes and fees, which are calculated when you confirm your reservation. Airfares can be changed by an airline up to three times a day during the week, and once on weekends. So sometimes a fare that is listed may have changed between the time you saw it and the time you tried to book it.

Visit www.flyvps.com today to see your low airfare postings from the Okaloosa Regional Airport (ORA). ORA passengers are up over six percent for the year, compared to Pensacola which was up just over two percent, and March alone showed increases of over three percent.
